Release Schedule for the Kansas City Fed's Rural Labor Indicators

KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI – The Rural Labor Indicators (RLI) released through the Kansas City Fed's Center for Agriculture and the Economy allow users to compare local labor market health across farming-concentrated counties, other non-metro counties, and metro counties. These measures highlight meaningful differences in labor market conditions across counties with different populations and farming concentrations and provide a consistent way to compare labor market conditions in these counties over time. The release schedule for 2027 is as follows. The release will be posted on the Kansas City Fed's website, KansasCityFed.org, on the dates below:
