

Jenny Schuetz, University of Southern California

Jenny Schuetz is an Assistant Professor in the School of Policy, Planning, and Development at the University of Southern California. Her primary research interests are urban economics, local public finance, land use regulation and housing policy. Her research has been published in a variety of journals, including the Regional Science and Urban Economics, Journal of Housing Economics, Real Estate Economics, Journal of Policy and Management, Urban Studies and the Journal of the American Planning Association. Current research projects include the economic determinants of neighborhood retail services, and the causes and effects of changing spatial patterns among Manhattan art galleries.

Dr. Schuetz earned a B.A. with Highest Distinction in Economics and Political and Social Thought from the University of Virginia, a Master's in City Planning from M.I.T., a PhD in Public Policy from Harvard University, and completed a post-doctoral fellowship at New York University's Furman Center. Previously Dr. Schuetz worked for the Public Housing Strategic Consulting Group of Abt Associates Inc., assessing public and subsidized housing programs for a variety of clients, including the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and local public housing authorities in Boston, Louisville, Miami-Dade, Newark, and St. Louis. She also worked for the Innovations, Research and Technology Division of the Fannie Mae Foundation and, together with the Joint Center for Housing Studies at Harvard University, provided consulting services to the Mexican federal housing agency. Before joining USC, she was an Assistant Professor in the Economics Department at City College of New York.