

Committee continues search for Bank president

October 13, 2022

See updates on the search for a successor to Kansas City Fed President and CEO Esther George, including a video recording of a virtual town hall conducted in July.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City's presidential Search Committee hosted a virtual community town hall on July 13 to address questions and provide an update on its search for a successor to President and CEO Esther George.

María Griego-Raby, a member of the Bank's Head Office Board of Directors and chair of the presidential search committee, discussed the search process during the town hall, moderated by Tim Todd of the Bank's Public Affairs Department. Watch a recording of the event here.

Go to the Presidential Search page to learn more about the overall search, meet the Bank directors serving on the Search Committee, read the full job description and browse FAQs about the process.
