

Statement on transparency and accountability by the 12 Reserve Banks

March 24, 2023

See the Federal Reserve Bank's statement on transparency and accountability.

---

March 24, 2023

The Federal Reserve Banks are committed to transparency and accountability and each Reserve Bank has existing procedures for providing information to the public. In the interest of further strengthening transparency and accountability, the 12 Reserve Banks have agreed to adopt a common policy for public requests for information and expect to implement this policy by the end of this year. Additional information on the policy will be available on each Reserve Bank's website later this year.

December 2023 update: The Bank's Transparency and Accountability Policy, which will go into effect January 1, 2024, is available here.

---