

The Changing Retail Payments Landscape

Terri Bradford

Session Description: During this session, the findings from the Federal Reserve's Triennial Payments Study will be reviewed. An overview of alternative and emerging payments will be provided. And the latest progress on the Strategic Improvement of the U.S. Payments System's Faster and Security Task Forces will be discussed.

Lessons Learned:

- Fed payments studies provide a wealth of information about US noncash retail payments—how they are made, trends and unauthorized transactions.
- There are a number of payments innovations that have the potential to change how and where payments are made, but will consumers adopt them?
- Broad payments system stakeholder support is at work in advancing initiatives to enhance payment system speed, efficiency and security.
